Health care right is an inclusive right, extending not only to timely and appropriate health care, but also to the underlying determinants of health which include an adequate supply of safe food, nutrition, housing, access to safe and potable water, adequate sanitation, access to health- related education and information, including on sexual and reproductive health.

Some groups or individuals, such as children, women, persons with disabilities or persons living with HIV/AIDS, face specific hurdles in relation to the right to health. These can result from biological or socio- economic factors, discrimination, and stigma, or, generally, a combination of these. Considering health as a human right requires specific attention to different individuals and groups of individuals in society, in particular those living in vulnerable situations.

- The right to the highest attainable standard of health is a human right recognized in international human rights law.
- The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, widely considered as the central instrument of protection for the right to health, recognizes "the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health."
- It is important to note that the Covenant gives both mental health, which has often been neglected, and physical health equal consideration.

Report On International Women's Day Celebration

An interactive session on International Women's Day

By: T. Deepthi

Date: 08/03/2019

Venue: A. M. Reddy Memorial College of Engineering & Technology

On the occasion of Women's day on 08-03-2019 we have conducted an enlightenment interactive session on 'International Women's Day'. The resource person for this program was Smt. Rajalakshmi Garu.

Rajalakshmi Garu told the importance of international Women's Day (IWD) as it is a global day celebrating the social, economic, cultural, and political achievements of women.

The day also marks a call to action for accelerating gender parity. Significant activity is witnessed worldwide as groups come together to celebrate women's achievements or rally for women's equality which is a call for positive change advancing women.

- IWD is not country, group, nor organization specific. No one government, NGO, charity, corporation, academic institution, women's network, or media hub is solely responsible for IWD.

- The day belongs to all groups collectively, everywhere. Support for IWD should never be a battle between groups or organizations that declaring what action is the best or right.
- Feminism's eclectic and inclusive nature means that all efforts advancing women's equality are welcome and valid and should be respected. This is what it means to be truly 'inclusive.

So, in the seminar students actively participated in the interactive session and gave a lot of suggestions and thoughts on how to encourage the women empowerment in both public and political life.
